Dan Edwards

Sales Consultant

Experience

I graduated from Bournemouth University in 2012 with a BSC honours degree in Sports Management; which included a placement year teaching sports to children with learning difficulties which was extremely rewarding!

After my studies, I decided to travel the world living in numerous countries including Australia, Canada and America before finally settling in New Zealand where I stayed for 5 years working in the charity sector. Realising you can never be away from home for too long I decided to move back to the big smoke of London and start a career in property which has always been an interest of mine.

I started out as a sales negotiator in West London for 2 years before I was given this very exciting opportunity to work with the team here at GLP. Having had a great start to my career I am very excited to see what the next few years have in store and to help people find their dream homes in Central London.

Why am I good at my job

I have always had a desire to work in Sales and love working with people. Naturally, I am quite sociable and love looking around properties and seeing different styles and trends in the market. Moving across to Central London was ideal for me as you get such an eclectic mix of clients, it's fantastic just getting to know them all and find out how they ended up here. I am highly ambitious so this, alongside my friendly nature no doubt gives me a strong skill set for this role. It also helps that I love what I do!

“Working with Dan was a real pleasure, his knowledge on the London Property Market, and more specifically the sales process ensured a really smooth stress-free experience. Receiving a congratulatory bottle of Champagne on move in day was simply the icing on the cake”.
