Rob Hill MBA

Director

Experience

After completing my MBA at the University of Liverpool I worked in Urban Regeneration before heading into Central London lettings in 2002 and creating Greater London Properties in 2003. During this time I have been fortunate to work not only in some of the most diverse and prestigious villages across London's heart land but also to have met many wonderful people and visited some of the most expensive real estate in the world. I have been working in investment and leasehold sales since 2006 and pride myself in offering honest accurate valuation for capital and rental properties for individuals, large PLC's and pension funds.

Why am I good at my job

Having my own business has allowed me to create an agency with the flexibility and customer service that a PLC simply cannot offer – this was part of my vision back in 2003.

I genuinely love property, the industry and most importantly this city – watching different postcodes develop and grow over the years has been fantastic and I can't imagine doing anything else. I surround myself with people I like and we have clients that have been with us since the very beginning. It really is like a family.

Opening the Bloomsbury Branch was a particular highlight for me and it has enabled us to evolve and, with the help of some incredible new technologies, become the leading independent estate agency in Central London.

“Working with Rob and his team at GLP has always been a pleasure, his intricate knowledge of the different markets cannot be beaten. I wouldn’t work with anyone else”
